My condolences to the family of Dylan “el guero” we had the pleasure of meeting him in Chicago when he came to visit Josiah and Kayla. He was a very friendly person, and he stole everybody’s hearts. I know there’s no words to say to the family, it’s hard to lose someone you deeply love. I’ll keep his family in my prayers. And Dylan in my prayers for his soul to be at peace. Sometimes we don’t understand why things happen, and we question god but he is already at the light where there is no pain and no worries. Rest in peace Dylan “el Guero”. Love the Rodriguez family.

Never thought I’d be writing a sad post about you D-Mil. Because every moment and memory we had together was positive. From meeting you in 7th grade, to hanging out everyday, taking our senior trip together, you visiting me in Chicago, to you and Jenny asking Kayla and I to be your daughters god parents. I Forever will remember our brotherly bond and how you treated my daughter Alaiah and gave her anything she wanted when uncle D-Mil was around. I know you would’ve been the same way with Anayiah but unfortunately god had other plans for you and couldn’t meet her. I remember you coming up to us after your baby shower and asking us the question about godparents, and with no hesitation we said yes! We were so honored for you to trust us and telling us that you know we’d take care of Aaviana if he ever needed. I know I will never fill your shoes for her, but I promise to always care and protect her like one of my own.❤■ till we see each other again. I love you Dylan D Miller■■

This isn't easy for a parent to go through. I know this from experience losing my own son. I know how hard it is to find words to something that is so tragic in your life Nancy. If there's anything I can help you with please reach out to me. It'll take some years to make it easier to handle it's something that you will never get over.
