I just finished watching "Utah's World War II stories nine years after Rick's death. He is just as vibrant, generous, and convincing on screen as he was in real life. He welcomed me as a new oral surgeon at St Marks Hospital with warmth and enthusiasm in 1974. We were both sons of grocers where we learned how to face up shelves and line things up. It served us well in our professional careers! He was a master at getting things straight! Being his friend was a high honor.
