

William C White, Jr.

May 7, 1944 ~ August 5, 2020

I was blessed to serve as Carolyn White’s visiting teacher for many years. I felt the sweet spirit of Brother and Sister White in their home. Bill never complained but was always gracious and had that twinkle in his eye. He was was well educated in gospel and civil matters. His testimony was strong. I was privileged to be Brother and Sister White ‘s friend. He will be missed.

`Bill always welcomed me with a strong hug and a big warm grin whenever I came to visit, or if our families met up somewhere. `Bill married my older sister, Carolyn, when I was a young teen. From the time I met him, Bill always treated me with respect and validation. He made a positive difference in my life. For this, I am grateful. `I don't remember details of the occasion, but I once took a road trip with Bill and Carolyn while in my teens, and Bill made it interesting by telling me the many historical facts and trivia of the various locations we were driving through or passing by. He made potentially tedious experiences interesting (no cell phones, WiFi, or Serius radio in those days). I am grateful. Later when I was grown with a family of my own, I was invited with my family, to join Bill and Carolyn's family on an outing to the Redwoods near the coast of California. Bill patiently sat at the entrance of the trail on a bench while the rest of us all had a great time walking the trails and exploring the beauty that mother nature created, but not before Bill offered some historical tidbits about the area. I am grateful. Bill and I have had lovely visits and conversation through the years. I feel that we had a mutual familial love and respect for each other. I am grateful for what time I shared with him. Bill, I will always remember our usual greeting of me planting a big ol' kiss on your cheek and your big strong hugs and seeing your face beam as I came through the door to visit the family. 'Love, 'miss you!
