Sally and Brooke were there for me when I was a young woman. I will always be grateful for her love and kindness.

What a blessing in my life to have known your parents. We raised kids together and then watched them blossom into amazing adults. Sally always made you feel that she was so happy to see you and offered her love and attention to my family. She faced life's challenges with grace and was profoundly aware of her many blessings. Thank you for the example you have set for all of us.

Dear Liz, My heart is reaching out for you. May you and your family find the strength you need. Lots of love. Rashmi

Sally was my counselor in the Federal Heights Ward Relief Society. She was a very calm, loving person, and she was also very loyal--to Brooke and her family. She was not at all judgmental. She was just a faithful, loving, sensible person--a really good counselor, just exactly what I needed and wanted then. My condolences to the family!

Years ago, when I was a young mother living in the Federal Heights Ward, I got to know Sally. I always admired her and enjoyed her friendship. Years passed and we both had gone through the travails of life's ups and downs and I ran into her at the sixth avenue Smiths. We talked about things we remembered and about our lives to that point. There, in an aisle at Smiths, we had a deeply personal conversation about our loses and experiences. We were both in tears. The thing about Sally was that she was able to connect on a "soul-to-soul" level which was a gift that I totally appreciated. She was openly honest and genuine. It's funny that even now, when I think back on that conversation, I feel that connection and with it a rush of emotions. She was wonderful. emotions for it
