

David Woodrow Wilson Rule

May 12, 1930 ~ Nov. 10, 2020

Uncle Woody, thank you for your kindness and example of manhood. Always calm, always ready to help, always ready to laugh, always kind. One of my favorite memories of you: My family was in Utah during one of the many times we passed through. Summertime, noonish, at my favorite aunt and uncle's house. Uncle Woody came home from his second job wearing the Texaco Star on his short-sleeved shirt. Biceps that looked like they were going to bust the sleeves. Getting some lunch and then back to work. A man's man. Strong and determined. I'll look forward to that day when its my turn to enter into the rest that those who trust in Him will be gathered in unspeakable joy. I'll be looking for you, too.
