I worked with Coleman in Maine at the VA We worked together for several years I remember one of my fondest memories was on Good Friday where went to this seafood restaurant and we had their famous seafood chowder packed full of lobster and clams etc And he said we are sacrificing it Good Friday And we both laughed so hard Thomas Franchini

Julie, I was so sorry to hear of the passing of an old friend. Working on your house plans together was one of the more memorable experiences in my life. (You were tough to please, but you forced the outcome into a memorable home… one I often still drive by.) I always meant to keep more in touch after that, but then the rest of life happened. Had I known Coleman loved ping pong, I would have come and played often. It is one of my passions too. I've been thinking a lot lately about "time" and how everything, including many I love, keep unavoidably slipping into the past. Now Coleman has slipped by us. I only hope Heavenly Father eases this moment for you and your family and helps you to fondly remember him in that past. Eternity exists to help put these moments into proper perspective.
