What a Beautiful Woman. She definitely was the glue to the family. She loved her children like no one I have ever seen. She would glow when her Grand children were in the room. I felt very honored to know this family and will always cherish knowing Jayne. Love to all of you.

Death-The Journey beyond life- There are remarkable similarities between birth and death. Bruce R. McConkie said: "We know that this great plan of progression called for birth which would provide a mortal tabernacle for our eternal spirits, and for a death which would free those spirits from the frailties, diseases and weaknesses of mortality." The words birth and death both describe movement. Birth describes our movement from the spirit world to mortality. Death describes our movement from mortality to the spirit world. With each movement we terminate our existence in one place and initiate our existence in another. When God sends forth a tiny soul To learn the ways of earth, A mother's love is waiting here— We call this wonder— birth. When God calls home a tired soul And stills a fleeting breath, A Father's love is waiting there This too is birth— not death Author Unknown I adored Jayne.
