

Jerry Fred Kellgreen

October 4, 1937 ~ June 4, 2023

Jerry was a big part of me growing up. He always seemed to believe I could do stuff that I never dreamed I could. Then he'd leave me to do it. I learned a lot from him about myself and in many ways about life. I loved Jerry and even though I didn't see him much in recent years I've thought about him often. He definitely contributed to who I am today. Godspeed my friend.

My favorite Jerry memory: The Kellgreens kitchen window was directly across their drive way to my bedroom window. I’m not sure whether he had an arrangement with my parents during the summer (because they both worked), but if I slept in past 8:00am he would open his window and melodically say, “Chelly! Good morning! The sun is up and you should be too!” Sometimes I would shut my window. Most of the time, he was my friendly summer alarm clock and I got up. I also loved “The Great K Street Wall” (all of 6 inches tall) where Becks and Kellgreens gathered on Sundays for ice cream and family slide shows. I miss lovely Karin and Jerry will not soon be forgotten. Love to Kara, Heather, Anna and Kaj.

My favorite Jerry memory: The Kellgreens kitchen window was in direct alignment with my bedroom window and just across the driveway. I’m not sure if he was in cahoots with my parents (because they both worked) but in the summer, if I slept passed 8:00am Jerry would open his kitchen window and melodically say, “Chelly! Good morning. The sun is up and you should be too!” (Sometime other variations of the same message.) Sometimes I would shut the window. But most often, Jerry was my friendly summer alarm clock. I loved Sunday gatherings with the Beckoweckles and the Kellgareenos on “The Great Wall of K Street” for ice cream and family slide shows. I miss lovely Karin and Jerry will not soon be forgotten. Love to Kara, Heather, Anna and Kaj.
