Susianne and Melia, we are so heartbroken for your loss. I am so grateful that we got the opportunity to be on a team with your family and spend time with you and Jon in Texas. Jon had such a sweet demeanor about him and was always one of my favorites on the sidelines. I will never forget how generous and kind he was to the girls, bringing them all sorts of drinks in Texas and the delicious cookies. We are praying for comfort and love to surround your family always.

- Katie Bradley

Susiane; You do not know me, we have never met. For several years I was a colleague of Jon at IBM. We met there a bit by chance. Jon was in a new job focusing on Electronics Industry accounts, like Juniper. And my job was to help IBM sellers like him with some industry expertise. Jon started to invite me to internal meetings and to a number of customer briefings of different kinds. I really enjoyed working with him, I think we both did. Jon was thoughtful, thorough but also kind and always in a good mood. He was a great communicator and was really good at establishing close relationships with executives of any level without ever being superficial. I told him many times “you can take me along to any meeting because I really enjoy working and hanging out with you.” It was obvious that his family was very important for him. He would talk about the kids and often he would talk about you, always with the same joy and awe… You were his rock, his anchor, his inspiration, like a deeply set part of who he was. You were his life in all aspects of this life. When he told me about his Glioblastoma diagnostic my heart sunk… My sister in law had the same disease and I knew that in most cases it does not end well… But like many of us, and him, and you I guess, I was hopeful that the Stanford clinical trial would cure the disease… Four years feels so cruelly short…. I have lost people very close to me including a child, so I will not tell you that things will just get better and that everything will be fine…. The pain and the feeling of void never goes away… sometimes that pain and the secret joy of having lived with and loved so much another human being blend together… pain and blessing have some of the same colors and emotions. I hope you and the kids have the right support in this very difficult moment… If you feel I can do anything to help just reach out. I send you and your children the kindest regards. I met Jon a few years ago when he and his family moved next door. I instantly was attracted to this great man and we fast became dear friends. I will so miss our endless conversations: from the discussions about The nature of God, the purpose of life, how to be the best husband and father, why we each have trials, to even how to best eradicate rodents from our yards, there is a void that is left in my heart knowing that I will not have him physically in my life anymore. Life is so very fragile and so precious. Jon wanted to live more than anyone I know, and yet he faced his mortality and cancer with resolve, a great faith and with humility. Jon knew that life was not fair, but yet, it is so beautiful. He played the hand dealt him to perfection. I will always love you Jon. I will always love your sweet wife and your beautiful kids. And I will take every opportunity afforded me in the coming years to keep letting your kids know what a great father they came from. Susiana, I am so so sorry for the pain you are going thru. I have come to believe that the pain is commensurate with the impact the loved one made—Jon made a huge impact on so many lives. May God give you peace at this time. We are always here for you.

- Douglas Brady

I can't believe Elder Manning is gone. I also can't believe that for years I emigrated to the US to live in the Sandy 2nd ward and we were practically neighbors but had no idea. We labored in Durban for a greater purpose and you were one of the finest in the Lord's Army. I truly mean that. Lala ngoxolo Elder Manning.

Dear Susiane, Melia, Analise, and Havili, I am a nurse practitioner on the Neuro-Oncology team at Stanford. I saw Jon in clinic recently and it was a pleasure that visit as well as other visits. His positive attitude and determination to fight for himself and all of those he loved was so inspirational. He spoke of you all often and how special you were. Though Jon didn't live a long life, he lived a full one. It was my pleasure to be a part of his journey. I wanted to let you know what a great man your husband and father were. I will always remember his great smile and positive energy. He will be missed in Clinic D, Stanford Neuro-Oncology clinic. Blessings to you all, Gwen

I remember getting to know Jon as my cute little cousin on the houseboat at Lake Powell. And then I met him again as an amazing adult man who woke up early to cook breakfast for my family when we visited, and who interacted so beautifully with his wife and children. He lived life so well and set an example for all of us. I love you all and my heart is aching for all of you.

Wishing you and your family comfort, peace and hope during this time of extreme sadness ■.

So sorry to hear of Jon's passing. Jon was a great ambassador for IBM and over the 3-4 years we worked together Jon went beyond being just a work contact - myself and many at Juniper considered him a friend. He was a driven advocate and never gave up. The groundwork he built is the foundation of our success today. He will be truly missed. Chris

I was deeply saddened when I heard the news of Jon's passing a few days back, his smiling face kept coming back in my mind. Jon was a great colleague, but more than that, he was an outstanding human being. Always optimistic with a great sense of humor. I will miss you, my friend, rest in peace.

- Partha Bose

I was to share my deepest sympathies with Jon and his family. I only knew Jon through IBM, but I really got too know how incredibly strong and devoted he was as a business professional and more importantly a husband and father. May God bless Jon and my God watch over his family.

- John Goode

Jon was such a good man. Saw him a couple times after high school. I always remember his big heart and lifting him up after he kicked some winning field goals in our football games. “The Foot” was such a blessing and always had a smile on his face. Jon thank you for the life you lived.

- Doug Bonham

I went to high school with Jon, but unfortunately we didn’t stay in touch over the years. I played on the football team with Jon and one of my favorite memories of him on the team was the game where he kicked a successful onside kick and then 30 seconds later hit the game winning field goal against our rival Bingham. Was a lot of fun. My heart goes out to Jon’s family.
