

Marsha Ann Collins

January 19, 1949 ~ December 11, 2023

This is shocking and sad. I loved gettin Marsha on the telephone when I worked for jetblue and she was in our crew support department. Always made my day. Rest in glory ■

Marsha, I miss you so much, just knowing I can't call you or run into you at the craft store. Is hard. Losing Toni this year and now you, it leaves. Peggy and me. We could talk about anything and everything no matter how much time past. Missed our Christmas dinner. I love you.

Marsha was our son's primary teacher. He was a difficult little Sunbeam. He was one of the youngest Sunbeams and he was a handful. He was so difficult we decided we were going to pull him out of primary and home-primary him. Marsh brought over cookies to our house on Valentine's just for him. It made him feel so loved and made a huge difference for him, and we kept him in primary. Who knows what would have happened to our family if we'd quit going to church. Marsha is one of those unsung heroes that makes a huge difference in people's lives through small but crucial acts of service. We will miss her ready smile and quick wit. I love her so much!
