In life, we all have moments of self-reflection, times when we get caught up in our own struggles. Today I learned that my good friend passed away, and it has deeply humbled me. Sean was a true and proud father, a great friend, a mentor, and a man of sound advice. You were important to me, and you will always be remembered.

Sean was like a mentor to me, and even though our friendship was only a handful of years, I don’t think I could quantify how much he taught me. He might have been the first person that made me feel truly smart, despite a lifetime of testing poorly in school. Our deep conversations and building of Time Machine were genuinely world opening and life changing for me. Sean changed my life for the better. He supported my art, my career, and he was an amazing cheerleader to everyone close to him. I admired him for that and so much more. Aiden, I cannot fathom how much you’re hurting right now, I am so sorry. Your father was a great man with a big heart. I wish that so much had turned out differently. Sending you my love. Sean will not be forgotten by me. -Sarah

Im so grateful to have had a childhood with my big brother Sean. He taught me everything and was my protector. He was funny, fearless and brilliant. Often thinking of himself like McGuyver, he invented cool stuff even as a kid. I will miss and love him the rest of my days here on earth. He is loved and hopefully at peace. Miss you big brother.

Sean was extremely intelligent and very interesting. I didn’t know him very well. I had a few business dealings with him however I could tell he was a very special human. My condolences go out to his family. I know he has a very intelligent son who he was extremely proud of. In fact, he gave me some really valuable parenting advice for my son.
