

Stephan "Todd" Wahl

October 27, 1972 ~ October 19, 2020

---

Jess, in a small way, I understand the depth of your loss and grief. When a tragedy occurred in my life a few years ago, I didn't want to survive it. But a few things helped me get through. I learned to "Trust the Journey" as I continued to take one step at a time. My mantra became "Never the less, she persisted" !! And a book by Sheryl Sandberg "Option B" which she wrote after her husband's sudden death. And in time, I began to understand and find happiness again in my journey. You will too. My love and thoughts and prayers are with you and your son. Sincerely, Catie's Mom

- Deborah Cartisano

---

I had known Todd for a number of years. Being a subcontractor for Tall Pines. I had got to know his personality. He was a fun guy to be around and was very knowledgeable of his work. He will be greatly missed in the Tall Pines family. My heart goes out to you and your family. May the love of our Father in Heaven be with you in these troubled times and years to come.

- Eric Jacobsen

---

I am so sorry for your loss. Todd was a great man. I met him back in 2000 and from the day I met him he took me under his wing and soon became my older brother I never had. He was always there when I needed him. If I needed to talk to someone or in a fight. He was always there. I new him in the crazy years. I loved him and trusted him along with my mother who looked at him as a son and older brother to me, as a protector. She always new I was safe with him no matter the crazy shit we where doing. After I left Utah to join the Marines to kill my own addictions with drugs. I came back years later finding out that he had been sober for 9 years at the time and I lost it with happiness. Then I found out that he met you when in the same place and I was so damn happy for him. I made fun of his old ass because he was 4 years older that he just then became a father. I new Nolan was in great hands. I only saw him at Home Depot where I work but it was always seeing him and talking about how our life's became awesome after all we been through. I was there when he got shot and there when he got stabbed every time I new he was strong and selfless because example we where in a mosh pit and I was getting overwhelmed and he backed me up even though he had stitches and days after he got shot. Well enough of me rambling but I want you to know if you need anything and I mean ANYTHING please let me know.

- Lee Cronin

---

Jessica, Oh, there aren't any good words for this. I am so very sorry--what a loss. I'll be thinking about your family and I'm so sorry.

- Claire Momberger

---

So sorry for your loss.

- Stephen Young

---

we or pray for your lose I pray that God is with your family in this time of need be strong in the Lord God's will keep you cherish the moments in the memory that you have with your husband that's your husband is looking down at y'all both and just remember that he will always be there in spirit it is hard when you can never get over a death and this will take a long time for you to heal and had a strength and just be encouraged God know where your heart is and God know that you will always be the love of your husband life just remember to put God first from the watts family

- Sheila watts