Earl flew on patrol missions over the Pacific and was stationed in Saipan and Okinawa, Japan.

Earl was a member of Patrol Bombing Squadron, VP-26, a unit of the Third Fleet, United States Navy. His squadron entered Tokyo Bay for the purpose of accepting the surrender of the Imperial Japanese Government and assisted in the subsequent occupation. His unit was the first squadron to operate from Tokyo Bay, under Admiral W.H. Halsey, U. S. Navy Commander of the Third Fleet. Earl traveled the world with Dorothy and liked to tell of his journeys and share the many photographs he took. He enjoyed many outdoor activities with his family and Earl relished in taking his children and grandchildren out for ice cream as well as adventures to Lagoon.

Earl was an avid gardener and anyone who visited his home would have to take a walk through his meticulous gardens. Earl was admired for his green thumb, patience, and gardening knowledge.

He enjoyed photography and captured many special moments of his friends and family. Before a picture was taken instead of, "Say Cheese." Earl would always say, "Say sh*t!" to get a smile.

His ability to remember and tell jokes was matched by none and every time after telling a joke he would laugh as though he'd just heard that joke for the first time.
