

Creighton Rider

July 10, 1958 ~ April 21, 2023

At the foot of Mt. Olympus, Creighton took his first breath.
A mountain man in spirit,
from birth until his death.

From mother came a love to swim,
among the waters clear.
From father grew the love to ski steep slopes both far and near.

An avid mountaineer he was,
of peaks that reached the sky.
His heart forever tethered to the mountains, soaring high.

Deep within the magic
of Glen Canyon's majesty, Lake Powell's beauty soothed his soul,
there he found tranquility.

He sure lived 'til he died.

He served a mission in Japan,
a humble hand he'd lend.
A true disciple he'd become,
and on the Lord, depend.

Mechanical by trade he was,
a true MacGyver, he.
Steel strings he'd strum into the night,
to set his mind a'free.

Atop the Matterhorn,
he asked Lisa for her hand.
Together they would face the storms,
and weather life's demands.

A father's love, it knew no bounds,
Creighty cherished every day.
Three children were his pride and joy,
in each and every way.

He sure lived 'til he died.

A clever soul with pranks to play,
on friends he held so dear.
His jest and jokes, good natured,
bringing joy from ear to ear.

He led the young men in his church,
their hearts he did inspire.
His wisdom and his gentle ways,
set many souls afire.

In Mexico, they knew him well,
as Señor Creighton, grand.
He left his mark on many lives,
friends all throughout the land.

For fifteen years, he fought the fight,
Lou Gherig's curse, his foe.
His bravery, a beacon bright,
to all he'd come to know.

He sure lived 'til he died.

Creight's heart inspired a group,
of cyclists far and wide.
United in their passion,
for him, they'd ride with pride.

From SLC to Vegas,
through summer's heat they'd race.
Supporting all with ALS,
a journey filled with grace.

Despite the fight with ALS,
he played a grandpa's part.
His grandkids knew his loving touch,
and hold him in their hearts.

He taught the world to find the joy,
in every trial faced.
His spirit, like a cowboy, strong,
his legacy, embraced.

He sure lived 'til he died.

Creighton Rowland Rider July 10th 1958 - April 21st 2023

With love, your kiddos.
