He worked for the Nevada Fish and Game as a rodman and engineering aide before going into the army during the Vietnam War, stationed in Oakland, California. He worked for UDOT both before the army and after as a Design Engineer until 1979 and completed many highway projects. He received his real estate license in 1980 and worked in commercial real estate for a short period before starting his own engineering business and machinery brokerage, buying and selling mining and manufacturing equipment. He designed and built several metal working machines.

Survived by his wife Donna, daughter Elisa (Mike) Fisher, son Trevor (Amy) Hansen, six grandchildren and sister Sue Hansen. Bill is preceded in death by his parents Gordon and Elise “Sis” Hansen.
